PRESS Circulation Campaign

We have had a cylinder press rebuilt for installation at the Herald shop in the Brighton Block. We need $100 to pay for the machinists' work, new parts, etc.

To make possible the early installation of this press and thus make the Torrance Herald a home product and also to build up the paper in every way we are asking every subscriber if he or she will, if possible at this time, pay up what they may be in arrears. And a year in advance, if you can.

And we are going to invite every resident of Torrance, not now a subscriber to join the Herald family and co-operate in making the paper a credit to Torrance. The subscription price is 50c every four months, 75c for six months and $1.50 per year.

GRANDMA NEVER LET HER HAIR GET GRAY

Kept her locks youthful, dark, glossy and thick with common garden Sage and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling. Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age and, as you all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look your youngest.

SUFFERING CATS! GIVE THIS MAN THE GOLD MEDAL

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority. He says that a few drops of a drug called frezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out. This drug is a sticky ether compound, but dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue. It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of frezone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Cut this out, especially if you are a woman reader who wears high heels.

HOME GARDENING DEPARTMENT

Growing Peas

The cool moist atmospheric conditions of the Pacific Coast is favorable to the growth of peas and yet in many cases evidence of success with them in the home garden seems to be lacking. The requirements in the growth of peas are very exacting, dry heat being very detrimental to their development. Abundant and continual moisture is necessary to be present in the subsoil during the entire period of their growth to accomplish satisfactory fruitage, but surface moisture in excess in this moist climate is likely to result in damaging cases of mildew unless preventatives and remedies are applied intelligently. Ample space should be allowed for their culture which should be deep and close up to the plants, as they root deeply and stand banking to advantage, as this places the roots deep down in the earth, giving them a cool moist location which is to their liking as they always prefer "cold feet." Water should be admitted into the subsoil in such a manner as to soak the subsoil without leaving the surface of the soil too wet.

Ridging and applying the water slowly assists in accomplishing this. Cool, new soils rich in plant foods are adapted to their growth.

New land which is fresh and sweet is fine for the pea, but the land should be well subdued and in good mechanical condition and devoid of bermuda and other grasses. Old strawberry beds well prepared are fine for peas, as well as soil in which peas and beans have been grown and an alternation of beans and peas with applications of fertilizers or the plowing under of the vines or a green or cover crop is a good practice in preparation for peas.

Peas appropriate a great deal of atmospheric nitrogen during their growth in cool moist climates, and under proper culture there is little loss of moisture to trees and often their growth in orchards are a decided benefit if the crop is gathered green and the green vines plowed under.

Peas withstand severe frosts and may be planted early in February or as soon as excessive rains are past. Deep plowing followed by fine pulverization of the soil surface is advisable. The planting may be done without ridging unless the weather is cold and wet at planting time.

At least one seed to every inch of the row should be used with the rows 15 to 18 inches apart for hand culture and 2 1/2 to 3 feet apart for field culture. The covering should not be over one to one and a half inches in cool wet weather and two to two and one-half inches in warm dry weather is sufficient as the seed is liable to rot before germination takes place if covered as deeply as most seeds of their size.

During their growth the soil should be worked to the plants until a ridge is formed and deep culture should be practiced as often as water is applied and as soon after watering as the condition of the soil will permit.

When the plants are eight inches high sift from a gunny sack powdered sulphur over them and repeat as often as is necessary to prevent damage by the green aphid and mildew. Applications of water with force from the garden hose followed by cultivation is very destructive to the aphid. Watering and cultivation should be applied at frequent and regular intervals up to harvest time which will increase the yield and prolong the bearing period with the sugar varieties.

The lack of moisture in the subsoil will shorten the yield materially, as does also the incrusting of the surface of the soil as the vines are very tender and the incrustation seems to bruise and girdle the vines at the surface of the ground, and while the vines may still appear green the flow of sap necessary for fruitage is lacking and the yields when this is allowed to occur will be disappointing.

For winter planting in my tests of eight of the leading kinds show that while the "Alaska" and "First of All" are not as rich and sweet as the "Yorkshire Hare," and other sugar varieties, the "Alaska" surpasses all others as to hardness and yields.

Every time you go to town

And start to throw your money round—

Say home-bought goods are the stuff for me,

Because they spell prosperity.

The dollar you send to the city or eastern store

Says "Good-bye, DM" for evermore—

But the dollar you spend in your own home town

Keeps a-circulating and a-circulating and a-circulating 'round.
